

Narrative Essay about Life

Introduction

Life is lovely and yet life isn't a bed of roses. Even though it is full of ups and downs, it has many aspects of awful experiences and successes. To some people, life is tough, merciless and cruel. These people see life as punishment throughout their whole lives. They, therefore, resigned themselves to destiny and believe all is finished. To them, there is nothing that they do that can ever be correct and prove themselves in life. They take pride in committing crimes and maiming others to avenge their ill-fortune. They lost every sense of path and in most instances, some of them cross as far as committing suicide, and simply to get away from the injustice life has meted out to them.

But many people see life as a task, a channel of innovations and ideas and prospects for success and a way to wealth. To them, life is nice, colourful and kind. Regardless of the scenario, these people find themselves in, they keep pressing on, believing in a purpose, a reason to be successful and get the maximum out of life. No wonder an adage says, "Where there is life, there's always hope." In my opinion, I belong to these folks who experience life.

The attitude

The desire for success or failure lies within a person's attitude. You can live life and enjoy it with utmost pride and achievement if you determine with all your mind, body and soul to be successful. However, life may be miserable to you if you take the whole thing for granted and wait on fate to play. The setting of goals and set plans to be able to attempt irrespective of the odds which can also move against you is one of the primary things needed to get the maximum out of life. These desires need to be result-orientated and to be accompanied up continuously even though things seem blurred or unyielding at the beginning.

Additionally, the mind is the centre of the whole thing. It controls your thoughts and ideas. A concentrated thought has never failed. A stable mind facilitates one to discover abilities and potentials. Brilliant men and women, both living and dead, had their minds centre on something and nothing deterred them from achieving their goals. Each of them had a belief or should I say faith that they held onto to nurture the perception, focus all their interest and live on it. And today, we've benefited in one way or the other from their innovations and exceptional ideas.

Life is a task and for anyone to get success in life, he/she needs to be prepared to show the stuff they're made of. He/she needs to be prepared to sacrifice time and build up the mind-body toward achievement. What's occurring in our surroundings should not affect or influence us in our daily quest for achievement in life. Alternatively, we must manage the happenings around us.

Conclusion

Life is so easy, yet many people rush and miss what they want to acquire in life. Don't rush in life. Take one step at a time. Each step needs to be nicely planned before being launched. It should be consistent, stable then you should mark and shoot. And before you realize it, the sky will become the beginning of your achievement.

All the awesome guys of nowadays have one way or the other tasted the other aspect of life however they did not cover. As an alternative, they were renewed to redefine their goals; they ride on with faith, believing in their capability, focusing their mind on something, understanding properly that in every black cloud there's always a silver lining.

I take life to be quite simple and do believe in my steps and enjoy my life.
