

Expository Essay on Friendship

What is friendship? It is a pure relationship between two people who do not have a hidden agenda. According to the dictionary, love is between people. But is it just dating? Not always, as in the case of best friends, it's more than that. Best friends share feelings or opinions that bring a sense of accomplishment and psychological satisfaction.

A friend is someone you can genuinely get to know, as well as trust them forever. Rather than being emotionally compatible with the personality of two people related to friendship, they have certain commonalities but desire to be together without changing their differences. Usually, friends encourage one another without suspicion, but sometimes the consideration of close friends positively affects you.

The Importance of Friendship:

We all need to have a best friend in life to whom we share everything. Every friend is critical, and their value is known to us. When certain situations arise, our friends should support that. One will never feel lonely in this world if true friends find one. And, of course, stress thrives on the lives of people who have no friends other than the billions of people on earth. Friends are critical during times of emergency and hardship. If you ever have a difficult time, having a friend who can help you get over it can make the transition easier.

Having friends you can trust can boost your self-confidence. Then again, the lack of friends can make you feel lonely and helpless, making you less potent in various matters, such as sadness and drug abuse. Having at least one person you can count on will build your confidence.

Choosing Your Friends Wisely:

Not all friends can add confidence to your life. It can also have side effects. It is essential to choose your friends wisely. Choosing the right partner is a difficult task but very important. In a situation where a few of our dear friends are misbehaving, for example, smoking, drinking, and drug use, we will sometimes be attracted to their bad habits. This is one reason why it is essential to make the right choice for friendships.

True friendship is a gift that a couple can enjoy. People who have it should show gratitude to God for having genuine pearls in their lives, and people who do not have a few good friends should always try the best ways to strengthen the best friends. There is no better organisation to have a close friend in need. You will always be happy in your one-room apartment as long as your friends surround you, and again, you can't find satisfaction even in your place if you happen to be away from others.

Types of friends:

There are varieties everywhere, so why not on friends. We can see different kinds of friends during our life journey. For example, your best friend at school is the person you are most attracted to. That friend, especially the girls, may be more incensed at talking to a friend than you are. Such a friendship is so intense that sometimes it is hard for others to sense that you are a close friend or a competitor.

Then there is another category of siblings. No matter how much you deny it, but your siblings or older brother and sister are those friends of yours who have lived with you for the rest of your life. You have a different set of friendships with them as you find yourself fighting them many times. However, in times of need, you will find that they are the first ones behind you, supporting you.

There is a further category of best friends, which we call professional friends. You will meet such friends when you are older and have chosen a career. These friends often come from the same organisation and are helpful during your years of peace. Some of them tend to stay with you or change companies.

Examples of friendship from history:

History has taught us much. Examples of true friendship are not far off. We have a well-known instance in history that shows the company's value. The most important of them is the fellowship of Krishna and Sudama. After he became king, we must all read or hear that Krishna met Sudama, his childhood friend, who treated him with respect even though Sudama was poor. It teaches us that friendship is not to be taken for granted. It has to be between people with the same mindset. The following examples are from Karna and Duryodhana and the Mahabharata period.

Despite knowing that the Pandavas were his brothers, Karna continued to fight alongside Duryodhan as his best friend and even laid down his life for her. What is another example of true friendship that a person can acquire? And from the same period, Krishna and Arjun were again called best friends. The Bhagavad Gita is an example of how a true friend can guide you to achieve success in life and make you follow the path of Dharma. Similarly, there are countless historical examples that teach us the value of true friendship and the need to provide for them.

Conclusion:

Whether you accept it or not, a friend plays a vital role in your life. It is essential to have a friend. At the same time, it is necessary to choose your friends wisely since they can either build you up or destroy you. However, the company of a friend is something one enjoys throughout one's life, and friends should be treated as the best treasure a person can have.
