

Argumentative Essay on homeschooling VS public schooling

Here you have an Argumentative Essay on Homeschooling VS Public schooling with Pdf. You can download it free of cost from here and take advantage of many more essays.

Introduction

Education is considered an essential asset to every child's future. Parents desire to provide their children with the best education possible. To give their children the best possible education, parents should select the best schooling they can offer, considering their children's abilities.

Among the options available are community education and home school. Parents run and manage rural schools, while the government runs public schools. Parents make decisions based on their social and economic beliefs and other factors based on their knowledge of schools. Some parents believe that homeschooling is better than public schooling and that the opposite is true of some parents.

Public school is the oldest system in the education system. I prefer home reading with other parents. The government pays tuition fees in a public school without uniforms and other necessities. Payment of tuition fees by the government ensures the education of many children, whether they come from rich or poor backgrounds. This is not the case with home education, as parents are forced to buy everything from textbooks to home teaching services.

In a public school, the standard of living is high. Children also interact with other children from different parts of the region. Children get to know how to connect with diverse groups of people from different parts of the world.

Public schools have sufficient funds to enable students to participate in extracurricular activities such as clubs, bands, and sports. These experiences help the child grow up to be physically and emotionally healthy.

Rural schools are gaining popularity for their benefits over public schools. Many parents see the cost of homeschooling as less than that of public schools. There are no essential requirements in a home school, which reduces its cost. Also, there are no mandatory tuition fees at home.

At home school, there is a family reunion. Every child grows up knowing their family values and cultural practices. The family does most of the work together, which is considered an essential part of learning. Each child is allowed to demonstrate their value and role in the family; this makes the children feel part of the home.

In terms of education, quality is improved in home schools. Parents decide which curriculum is best for their children based on their child's abilities. Many parents have received a formal education in public schools, and they have had both good and bad experiences regarding the quality of education in public schools. Also, the ratio of teachers to home school students decreases, and every student can be visited by the teacher at their level, unlike in public schools.

Performdigi

At home, the environment is safe, and parents feel that their children are safe. Children are not at risk of drug abuse, unwanted religion, bullying, etc., which may not happen in public school. Since such threats are out of the question, students are safe. The quality of education is essential for the future of each country. Therefore, all efforts and funds should be directed to quality education. The high level of teaching in the home school makes it more profitable than public schools. This means that home education should be encouraged and where possible, its costs can be funded by the government. Cost funding alone may not be enough, but your combination with other activities such as school sports will see great success and the best home learning option.

Also Read,

- Argumentative essay on the use of mobile phones in schools in 500 Words
- Argumentative Essay on Physical Education in schools in 600 Words | Pdf

